Home Improvement/Capital Project Updates

- Tuckpointing on front of school and parish center – work to be scheduled.
- Church exterior doors – electronics have been installed!
- Campus lighting - We are evaluating the need for additional lighting throughout.

PLEASE NOTE: Beginning December 1, we will no longer have a recycling dumpster on our property. Unfortunately, repeated instances of non-recyclable items being placed in the dumpster have resulted in additional contamination fees. Despite our efforts to address the issue, we have been unable to resolve it. As a result, we have made the difficult decision to discontinue this service. We appreciate your understanding.

Next weekend, December 5 and 6, the Parish Life Commission will once again have Advent Cake Bags for families to take home. Inside the bag will be a cake mix, icing, balloons, and candles. Each family is asked to make a birthday cake for baby Jesus. If your family makes a cake, please take a picture of the cake and send it to Peggy Clegg via email or text: pclegg@littleflowerparish.org or 317-403-7444.

We are happy to announce that:
Eric Rohrbach
and Ally Boyington
will be getting married on December 5, 2026.
Please keep them in your prayers as they make final preparations for their big day.

COMMENTARY ON THE ADVENT prayers of the ROMAN MISSAL

This Advent, Little Flower Parishioners are being invited to prepare for each Sunday's Liturgy by praying with and reflecting on the prayers (Collect, Prayer over the Offerings, and Prayer after Communion) used at Mass. The Prayers come from the Roman Missal, Third Edition © 2014 United States Conference of Catholic Bishops and are the actual prayers priests pray. The Commentary comes from the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (https://www.usccb.org).

Let these prayers and commentary accompany you each day during the week. How to pray them before each Sunday? Start by praying, "O God, come to my assistance." Then pause. Read each one of the prayers first without reading the commentaries. Then go back and re-read each prayer underlining, circling, highlighting a word or phrase that catches your attention. Take time to listen to the words and images that speak to your heart, and let them draw you closer to Christ as you prepare to welcome him at Christmas. Then read the prayer a third time with the commentary. Or, read them as a family during dinner or before bed. Invite family members to share a word or image that catches their attention.

The Collect is the prayer the priest says during the Opening Rite which "collects, sums up and gathers together all of the intentions of the Mass being celebrated". It prepares us for the mystery we are about to partake in. When the priest says, "Let us pray", that is an opportunity for parishioners to state their Mass intention and unite it to the Mass intention being celebrated.

The Prayer over the Offerings gives us a summary of our offering and points our minds and hearts to the coming Eucharistic Prayer. We are not mere spectators at Mass. We are invited to take part and to unite our sacrifices and indeed our whole lives to Jesus' perfect offering on the cross. The Second Vatican Council [in the Constitution on the Church, Lumen Gentium, 34] encourages ordinary Christians to make their daily offering united to the Eucharistic sacrifice: For all their works, prayers and apostolic endeavors, their ordinary married and family life, if patiently borne—all these become 'spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ' (1 Pet. 2:5).

The Prayer after Communion "brings to completion the prayer of the People of God, and also to conclude the whole Communion Rite, the Priest pronounces the Prayer after Communion, in which he prays for the fruits of the mystery just celebrated....The people make the prayer their own by means of the acclamation Amen"(GIRM, 89)." Think of the Prayer after Communion as a summary of what we have just heard, said, and done at the Mass, and gets us ready to live it out in our daily lives.

First Sunday of Advent

Collect

Grant your faithful, we pray, almighty God,
the resolve to run forth to meet your Christ with righteous deeds at his coming,
so that, gathered at his right hand,
they may be worthy to possess the heavenly Kingdom.
Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, God, for ever and ever.

Commentary

- The increasing activity of the faithful comes to the fore in this translation, revealing the richness of the Latin prayer that dates to seventh-century Rome and Gaul.
- The prayer begins with the gift of almighty God, but the way in which God gives is part of the gift. The Almighty elicits our cooperation in our own transformation.
- At the beginning of the prayer we are described as Gods faithful. We affirm that we are praying.
- Then the prayer offers a poetic reflection on our Christian lives. Our journey through life is described as running forth to meet Christ.
- Along the way we accomplish righteous deeds by the grace of God. Even as we are on the way to this encounter, Christ is coming to meet us.Not only does this prayer describe our lifelong journey, but it also describes our journey this Sunday to come to the church building where Christ encounters us in his body the living Church, in the word proclaimed, in the ministers, and especially in the communion we share.
- We are gathered at Christs right hand every time we journey to this encounter with Christ who comes to us not only in the liturgy but also in the least of our brothers and sisters. Our humble service of others in their need provides the righteous needs that accompany us to his coming. Then we process again, bringing our financial offerings so that with these the Church might continue its good works in society.
- The Almighty elicits our cooperation in our own transformation so that by the gift of God we are deemed worthy to possess the heavenly kingdom. The Almighty elicits our cooperation in our own transformation so that by the gift of God we are deemed worthy to possess the heavenly kingdom.

Prayer over the Offerings

Accept, we pray, O Lord, these offerings we make,
gathered from among your gifts to us,
and may what you grant us to celebrate devoutly here below,
gain for us the prize of eternal redemption.
Through Christ our Lord.

Commentary

- Life with the Lord involves an ongoing, reciprocal exchange of gifts. This exchange occurs on two levels in this prayer, on the level of things given and of persons giving themselves.
- This prayer appears only once in the history of the liturgy, in a sixth century compilation of individual mass booklets developed in Rome, until the prayer was discovered and included in the 1970 Latin edition of the Roman Missal.
- When the gifts of bread and wine and financial contributions are brought forward, the bread and wine are prepared and placed on the altar and this prayer is said over them.
- The initial divine gift begins the exchange. The Lord gives life to all things and with human cultivation brings forth the grain and the grape from the earth. By the work of human labor we produce from the fruit of the earth the bread and wine offered at mass as well as food offered to the hungry in their need. The financial contributions offered may also be seen as human collaboration with the divine gifts, whether natural or human resources.
- From these gifts that the Lord has given bounteously to us, we offer a portion in thanksgiving to share in communion and to share with our neighbor in their need. We ask the Lord to accept these gifts.
- The second level of exchange occurs in this prayer when the Lord grants us to celebrate the liturgy devoutly and, by implication, to live life from the liturgy we celebrate. Our collaboration with God by responding to the divine gift is what gains for us eternal redemption. Rather than a simple reward given after death, eternal redemption in this prayer characterizes our way of living from the Eucharist we are given to celebrate.

Prayer after Communion

May these mysteries, O Lord, in which we have participated,
profit us, we pray,
for even now, as we walk amid passing things,
you teach us by them to love the things of heaven and hold fast to what endures.
Through Christ our Lord.

Commentary

- The prayer after communion looks back to offer a reflection on the communion we have just shared, and it looks forward to tell us how to conduct our daily lives in light of the Eucharist we have just celebrated.
- This prayer was newly composed for the 1970 Latin edition of the Roman Missal and is based on two sixth-century Roman prayers that were subsequently lost to the liturgical tradition.
- This prayer turns to the language of commercial exchange to indicate that in commerce with our Lord we derive the profit. Simple participation in the mysteries, however, does not bring about automatic profit. Participation needs personal reflection, which, accompanied with the ongoing gift of our Lord, is profitable to us.
- As we prepare to return to our daily lives, our journey is described as a walk among passing things. Even passing things, however, are useful for divine instruction by which we learn to distinguish between the passing things and what endures. Once we have learned to distinguish between them, we learn to love the things of heaven and to hold fast to what endures.
- The prayer does not say that we reject passing things nor does it describe things of this world in a negative light. Rather, the Eucharistic bread and wine we share, these are the enduring things of heaven, the body and blood of Christ. By sharing our daily bread in communion we learn as a community to value, hold fast and even to love the enduring things of heaven.
- The communion we share informs our daily conduct as we learn to value even passing things as bearers of the enduring things of heaven.

Did you know there is a binder in the gathering area of church, just before you enter church from the gathering area, where you can write any prayer intentions you may have? This book is then presented each week with the offertory gifts, and your prayer intentions will be remembered as part of the general intercessions.
